* Windhoek is the only crematorium in Namibia, thus carrying out cremations for the entire country. Death statistics are currently not available for the entire country, only for the City of Windhoek. No burial statistics are available for Namibia and to apply a cremation rate for the country using figures applicable to Windhoek would be misleading. Latest figures obtainable.

NEW ZEALAND

Number of crematoria: Unknown

Most crematoria are owned and operated by the local council; there is a growing trend of trusts and funeral homes taking on the operation of crematoria within NZ. There is a national organisation for these facilities, but data is provided through the Ministry of Health. Within the funeral industry it is acknowledged that 75% of deaths are cremated and this is on the increase due to the diverse culture.

THAILAND

Number of crematoria: 2,077

80% of Thai people are Buddhist and therefore cremation is the usual method of disposal. With the exception of the Northern Province where open air cremation in a cemetery is still the custom, crematoria are located at temples which could number 20,000. However the above figure is based on the number of crematoria that have registered with the Department of Provincial Administration Thailand since 1993.

Statistics of cremations:
